Fair trade according to Oxfam

Oxfam Fair Trade sees fair trade as a lever for structural development in the South. We naturally pay a fair price to our producers. But did you know that they also get a fair trade premium? They use that money for projects that can benefit the entire community. Oxfam Fair Trade guarantees long-term cooperation for cooperatives. They can count on support and advice at different levels (technical, financial, organisational, etc.). Because our ultimate aim is to secure a strong market position for producers and to help them stand on their own two feet. Furthermore, we raise awareness about fair trade among consumers, businesses and governments.

Fair trade is also a sustainable choice on the ecological front. Not only does a fair price give hope for a better future, but the way we deal with our planet and resources counts as well. More than half of our product range is organically certified. You will find our products in the Belgian world shops and in many supermarkets. Institutional catering, restaurants, hotel and catering establishments, schools, governmental authorities and companies are also opting for Oxfam Fair Trade with increasing frequency. You can draw inspiration from this catalogue. And enjoy our quality products, which give more opportunities to producers in the South, in your hotel or catering establishment, company, municipality, or at home.

Coffee

In 1971 Oxfam bought the first coffee from Tanzania. It was the first 100% fair-trade coffee in Belgium. Furthermore, with over 50 years of experience and founded before Belgium's official Fairtrade-quality label, Oxfam is also the best selling fair-trade coffee. And the best-seller coffee naturally generates the most positive impact for the farmers!

"Fair-trade coffee means life, here in Kivu", says Daniel Habamungu, president of Muungano, a Congolese coffee cooperative. "Thanks to this coffee, farmers earn more, and we can establish health centers and schools in even the most disadvantaged villages."

Freshly squeezed Belgian apple juice 20 cl (in conversion to organic)

20 cl

Belgium

Freshly squeezed apple juice from 100% Belgian orchards, organic in conversion. Also available in 1 litre bottles. Organic in conversion, huh? This means that the fruit grower is already operating fully according to the biological principles but does not yet carry the certified label, because the soil is still recovering.

Organic apple juice

The organic apple grower feeds the soil with compost or manure, not fertilizer. He opts for a variety of robust, possibly older apple varieties that are resistant to certain diseases. Weeds are controlled by hand or machine, and certainly not with herbicides. "And you can taste it: Belgian organic apple juice, grown with passion for the planet!"
